VI. 次の英文を精読し、下記の設問に答えよ。

It is sometimes hard for people to understand that a creative genius, I like a writer, composer or artist, doesn't always lead a well-regulated life. He doesn't "produce" his work like someone in a factory.

Franz Schubert was one of the most productive composers. He lived to be only 31 years of age, yet he wrote over 600 songs, many beautiful symphonies and sonatas, and much choral and *chamber music. And he had a hard time doing it.

Creating the music wasn't his problem. He couldn't get a permanent position to support himself. He was underpaid by the publishers of his music. He was usually short of money. So there could be all kinds of reasons why he could start a work and it.

The exact date when he composed the Eighth Symphony in B Minor (Unfinished) isn't known. The manuscript gathered dust for more than 40 years until it was discovered in 1865 by a Viennese conductor and given its first performance.

Schubert's reasons for the Eighth Symphony remain a mystery. It is assumed that he intended complete the work, for the first nine bars of a scherzo movement were fully written and the rest of the movement sketched out. But something must have happened to prevent him it — and it remains . But it is a masterpiece.
