Cancer victim to race in marathon

A man who lost his left hip to cancer nine years ago is preparing to participate in this year's Osaka Marathon—in his wheelchair.

The Oct. 27 event will be the first full marathon for Kazunori Igarashi, a native of Nikko, Tochigi Prefecture. He had planned to participate in the race last year, but was (①) to withdraw after his cancer returned.

“(A)I don't want to give up. I hope my challenges will encourage people who are in similar situations.” he said.

In mid-April, Igarashi, 47, (②) increased his speed as he practiced in his athletic wheelchair in Nikko. “I want to feel exhilarated in the center of Osaka,” he said.

Before his cancer, Igarashi had traveled around the country selling Nikkobori, a type of (③) wood carving, and coached a local skating team in Nikko. In spring 2004, however, his left hip swelled and he was diagnosed with chondrosarcoma.

After undergoing (④), Igarashi started using a wheelchair and (⑤) to get around. For about a year, he said he felt as if he wanted to die.

However, he had a change of heart in winter 2008, when his second son, 19, took (⑥) in a national speed skating championship. Weeping at the sight of his son skating around the track, Igarashi said he felt like he wanted to participate in such an event.

In autumn 2009, he participated in a national sports convention for the (⑦) in Niigata Prefecture. He won the 200 meters and realized he wanted to quickly advance to long-distance races. Although he was (⑧) again in 2010, he successfully completed a local 10-kilometer race shortly after being discharged from the hospital.

Even (⑨) Igarashi himself believes his attempt at a full marathon is a bit wild, he said: “Because I have a goal, I can at least try my best. If I can participate in the marathon this year, I'll race without any (⑩).”

注: lose ~ to cancer=～をガンで失くす exhilarate=元気になる chondrosarcoma=軟骨肉腫

4. 次の英文を読み、設問に答えなさい。

The two college roommates had been getting to know each other for about a week. They enjoyed talking about a variety of topics. One afternoon, the conversation turned to personal ①appearances and clothes. Beth, who came from a big city, preferred a very casual style of dress. She believed that being comfortable was the most important guide in making clothing ②choices. Ellie, on the other hand, was ③convinced that she should always try to look stylish. She spent a lot of money buying designer clothes and bags.

"I think it's a waste of money to pay so much for a sweater that you still have to dry clean," said Beth.

"Well, I'd rather have only one nice piece of clothing than ten that don't fit," answered Ellie.

"You always look nice," Beth ④continued, "but I think it's too much trouble to run back and forth to the cleaners all the time. I just throw my stuff into the washer and it's clean for the week. I have more time to study, too."

"The reason I feel this way," confessed Ellie, "is that when I was growing up, I rarely had a chance to express myself. My clothes were always so boring, and now I can't ⑤stand looking sloppy."

"I understand your reasons, but I have one other question I'd like to ask you, if you don't mind."

"What's that?"

"If you're so neat, why is your side of the room so messy?"

"For the same reason that your desk is neat but you always look so sloppy."
