5. 次の英文を読んで各問いに答えなさい。

Living in another country is very ① () and you can experience many new things. However, many people also experience “② () shock” because of the differences in customs and ways of life. I am no exception.

When I first came to Japan, over fifteen years ago, I worked as an assistant language teacher in a public high school. I was very ③ () about my new job because I had heard that Japanese students are very serious and hardworking. However, I was very shocked by ④ () I saw in class. Students often did not do their homework and many slept during class. And ④ () surprised me even more was that their teachers did not scold them for their behavior. I asked one of my colleagues about ⑤ this and she said that it was because she felt sorry for the poor students, for their university entrance examinations were coming up. She said many of them had to go to cram school and study until really late at night, so it was ⑥ () that they would be tired during the daytime. I could ⑦ () believe my ears! Wasn't school the place ⑧ () students are supposed to study? Wasn't school the place to prepare students for their university entrance examinations? Wasn't school more important than cram school?

At that time I didn't know much about the Japanese education system and I was very confused. Everything seemed so different from ④ () I had been used to before. It took me a long time to be able to understand such differences. I now know that it's important to try to understand cultural differences in order to be able to accept ⑨ them.

(注) exception 例外, an assistant language teacher 外国語指導助手(ALT), colleagues 同僚たち, be supposed to ~ ~することになっている, cram school 塾
